Visiting the Butterfly House and Insectarium

At the Museum of Life and Science, there is a Butterfly House and Insectarium.

In the Butterfly House, it is hot and humid.
The butterflies need hot, wet air to live.

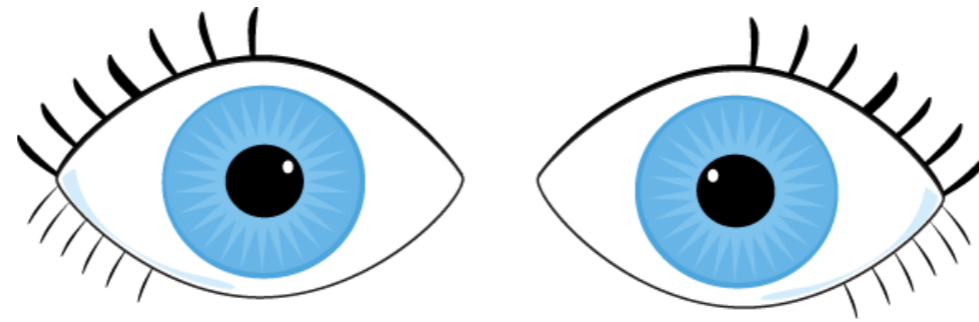

Butterflies may fly around me.

Butterflies may even land on me...but they will not hurt me.

There are also chrysalids, birds, plants, and fish to see in the Butterfly House.

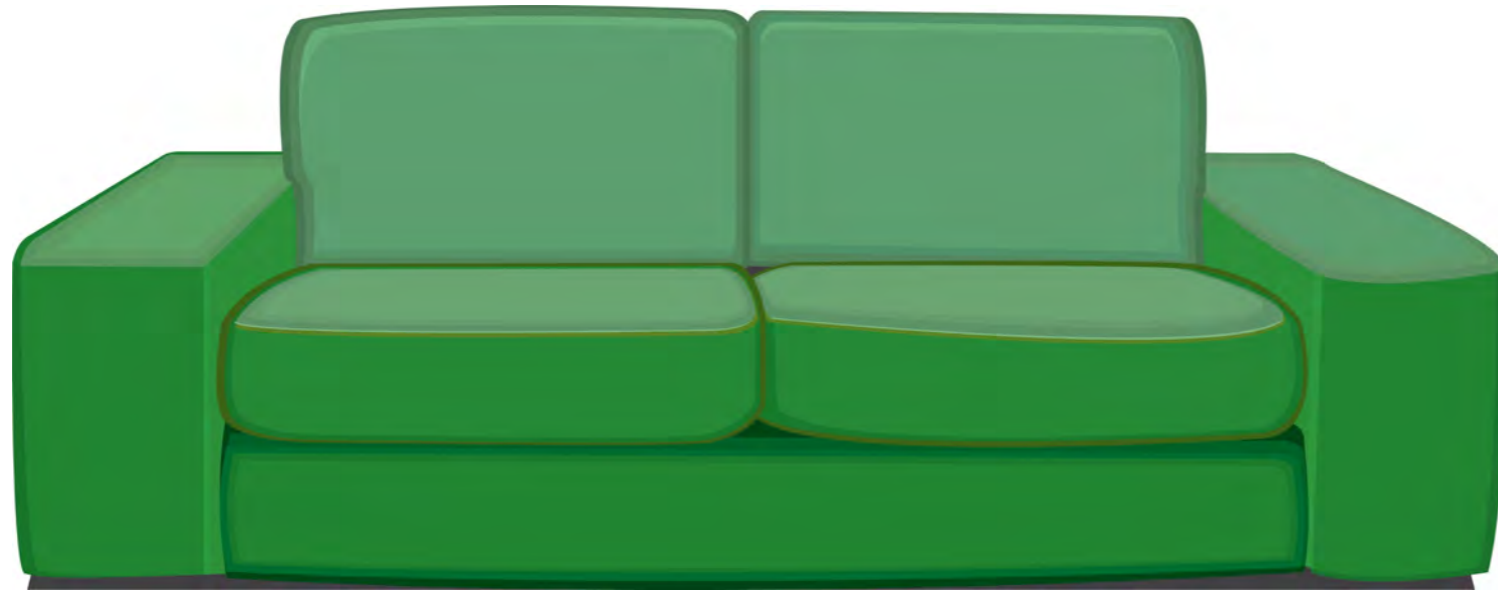

When I leave, I can look in the mirror to make sure there are no butterflies on me.

In the Insectarium, there are many different bugs and insects.

I can see ants, bees, spiders, and more.

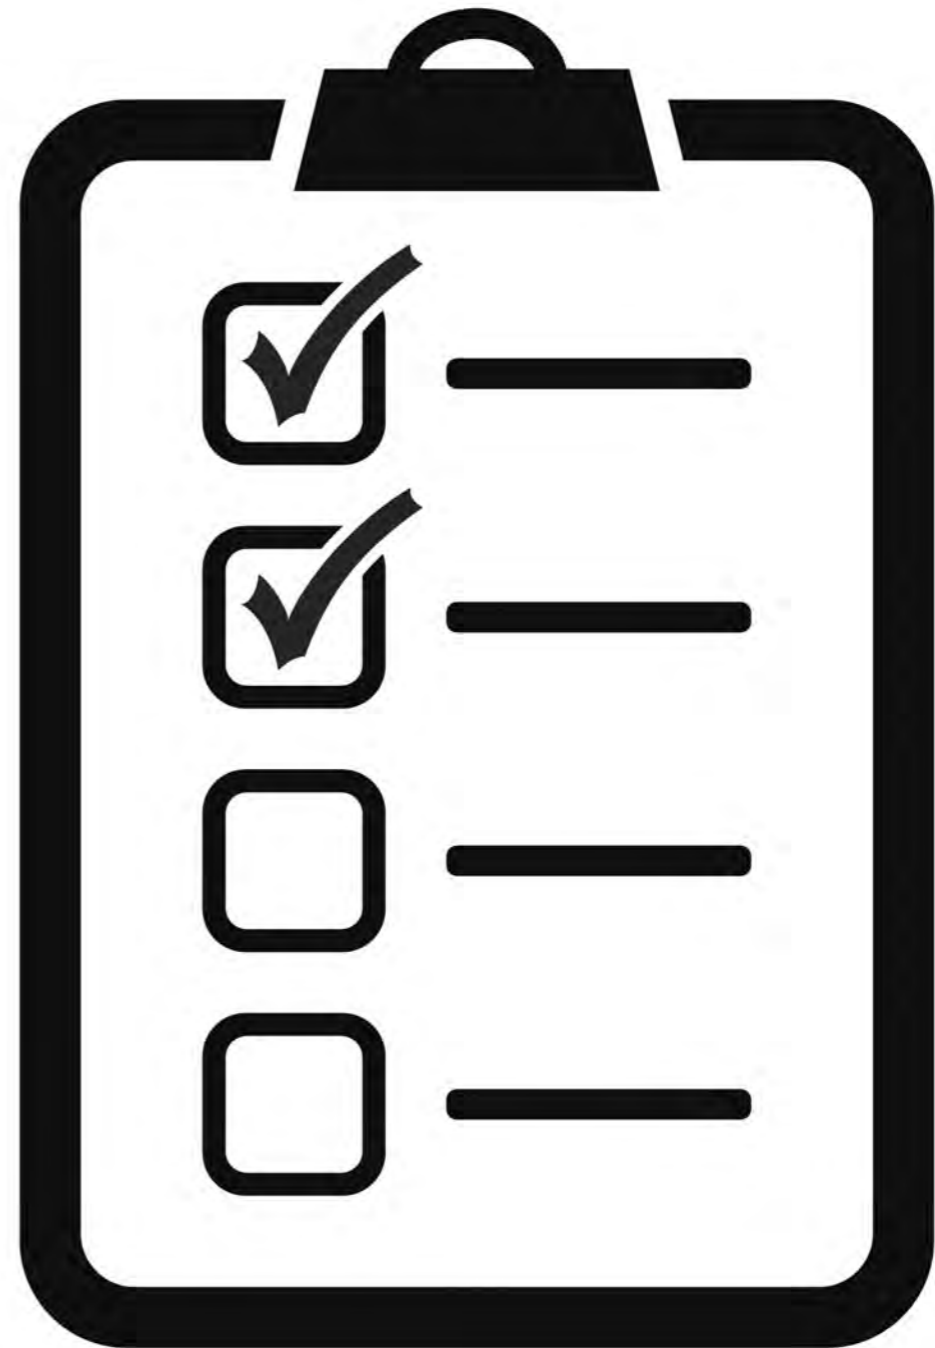

In the Insectarium, there are also places to take a break.

If I need to or want to take a break, I can.
I can sit in a quiet area.

When I feel relaxed,
I can check my schedule to see what's next.
